PICKING UP POOP IS SERIOUS DOG BUSINESS

Seriously, dog poop is nothing to joke about!

Dog waste is an environmental pollutant. In 1991 it was labeled a non-point source pollutant by the Environmental Protection Agency (EPA) placing it in the same category as herbicides and insecticides, oil, grease and toxic chemicals, and acid drainage from abandoned mines. Likewise, the Centers for Disease Control (CDC) states that pet waste contains harmful parasites. Need more proof that poop needs to be picked up?

DID YOU KNOW?

More than 80 million dogs live in America, creating over 10 million tons of poop each year.

Why is picking up poop critical to our health and the environment?

-  Dogs can harbor a wide range of harmful bacteria, viruses and parasites, which can spread in their poop to pets and humans.
-  Dog poop is a major source of potentially deadly E. coli, along with many kinds of worms, parvovirus, giardia and salmonella that thrive in feces.
-  Dog poop is not a fertilizer; it does not provide any benefit to soil. In fact, it can be toxic to plants, contaminating fruits and vegetables with harmful bacteria.
-  Dog poop pollutes waterways and poses a threat to public health. Just three days' worth of poop from 100 dogs contains enough bacteria to temporarily shut down 20 miles of a body of water typically used for swimming and fishing.

So, what's the best solution?

The most effective and responsible solution is to install waste disposal stations and poop pickup bags where pet owners congregate and walk their pets. Providing highly visible, convenient disposal stations have proven to help solve complaints and keep communities healthier.
